Of our yearly feasts, Decoration day is perhaps to most distinctly national. The adoring of the soldiers' graves is but the outward manifestation of a feeling which is all the stronger in that our national history s so brief a one. The men who fell at Chickamauga or Bull Run need not share their honors with the well-nigh

mythical heroes of a thousand years ago. They, themselves, have written, the ages of our own race, in their life blood, and they will be passed on to generations yet unboru. Monuments have been raised in their hontold from son to sire, will outlast the crumbling stones. Little did these heroes dream of all this, as they marched to do and to die. They had no vision of honors to be heaped upon them by a grateful people. With the simplicity inherited from their pioneer fathers, they marched out to meet the foe, all unconscious of the heroism which is the dearest heritage of their descendants.

Would they repeat the sneer if they could hear the reading of the poems our noblest poets have written of their glorious deeds; if they could listen to the songs composed in their honor and sung by the piping voice or, but the story of their deeds, as of age and the shrill tones of childof heroes who died, perhaps, are they were bors? No, surely if our critics were with us on the Decoration day, they would cease forever to call fickle the people which so gratefully remembers victorious dead.

New York World Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Practically a Daily at the Price of a weekly.

The striking and important events of the last year have established the overwhelming value of The Thrice a-Week World to every reader. For an almost nominal sum it has kept its subscribers informed of the progress of all our wars and, moreover, has re ported them as promptly and fully as grace? Hostess-Why, saying grace if it were a daily. With our interests still extending throughout the world, with our troops operating in the Phil ippines, and the great Pesidential campaign, too, at hand, its value is urther increased.
The motto of The Thrice-a-Week

World is improvement. It strives each year to be better than it was the year before, and public confidence in it is shown by the fact that it now circulates more than twice as many papers every week as any other newspaper, not a daily, published in We offer this unequaled newspaper
